

Show, Don't Tell: Free Bingo Game

"Look!" She waved her spelling test. "A gold star!" She twirled on tippy toe. "I didn't miss a word!" She spun around and around like a little ballerina on a music box.

Show vs. Tell Bingo

He began to feel nervous.	Her mean words hurt his feelings.	She was angry.
It is hot outside.	She was very sad.	My little sister was excited.
He felt disappointed when he found out that she wasn't staying.	The kids were surprised to see someone like her enter their classroom.	She was surprised.

Show vs. Tell Bingo

He suddenly realized something.

I was embarrassed.

He started to feel impatient.

My little sister was excited.

It is hot outside.

His parents were worried about him.

Everyone waited to hear the rest of the story.

She was surprised.

He was terrified.

Dale blinked, and then smacked himself on the forehead.

- Three Times Lucky by Sheila Turnage

My face goes bright red, I can feel it. Now sweat is pouring down from my armpits like somebody turned on a faucet.

- Tripping Over the Lunch Lady by Terry Trueman

March checked the time. He drummed his fingers on his leg.

- Duke by Kirby Larson

Wish I could do my work in the early morning before the sun's so fierce. But I don't complain. I take off my shirt finally, wrap it around my head to keep the sweat out of my eyes, and I keep on.

- Shiloh by Phyllis Reynolds Naylor

His father leaned down the table and put his big hand on top of Jess's hand. He gave his wife a quick, troubled look. But she just stood there, her eyes full of pain, saying nothing.

The café hung breathless, like a pendulum at the top of its swing.

- Three Times Lucky by Sheila Turnage

Tabby's eyebrows disappeared up into the scrunchie of her ponytail.

- Tripping Over the Lunch Lady by Lee Wardlaw

Panic shimmered through his body, tiny hammers hitting glass. He could shatter, he felt, in a moment, and he gulped air, trying to calm himself.
